INTR1

Hello, I'm ... from Statistics Canada. Last fall we conducted an interview with you for Human Resources Development Canada. We asked you questions about jobs, job search and household finances and I'm calling now to do the follow-up interview. Before we begin, I'd like to remind you that the answers you give to this voluntary survey will be added to your answers from the previous interview, and all information will be kept confidential under the Statistics Act. My supervisor may listen in to evaluate the survey.

(This information will help Human Resources Development Canada to evaluate the effectiveness of their programs.)

(The survey asks questions about new jobs, and job search activities, and updates some information on your household and expenditures.)

All HRDC programs are intended to provide assistance to Canadians who need help when they are unemployed or changing careers. Surveys like this provide information to the government so they know if the right people have access to their programs. It is essential that we get information from everyone, regardless of whether they would use any of these programs or not so that we get a complete and accurate picture of how Canadians move from job to job and how they deal with unemployment. (For example, it is just as important to know how many people get another job right away without needing to use UI as it is to find out how many people were denied access to UI because of changes to the rules.)

set timer (current time of day) to mark start of section A.

Initialize IPATH=9. NOTE: IPATH is used to control the path the respondent takes through the interview. The values are as follows: IPATH=1 means currently unemployed (no first job info to collect); IPATH=2 means currently employed (at a job started since wave 1 interview) (collect current job info only); IPATH=3 means currently employed at same job as current job in wave 1; IPATH=4 means currently unemployed, but started first job since wave 1 interview, and that job is not current job (collect first job info only); IPATH=5 means started first job since wave 1 interview and currently employed at a different job (collect both first and current job info)

If %EMP%=1, go to QA1; otherwise go to QA8.
